Kindergartens he Editor of The Evening Star:

this interesting subject which S. E. S. in a recent article in THE STAR does not mention, and yet it should not be lost sight of, and that is the influence of the school indirectly upon the parents of the pupils. I have heard here through a teacher who visits the families of her scholars, and in Baltimore through the police, that this influence is most marked, the chil-dren communicating to their mothers the lesat school.

I may add that children who are sent in summer to the country to stay with families who kindly receive them for a limited period, often learn enough to revolutionize the maternal housekeeping on their return.

THE TREASURY STANDS

The Speculation in Tickets is at an End. The speculation in tickets for choice seats on the treasury stands is at an end, thanks to the decided policy adopted by Chief Clerk Stocks, who has the matter in charge. When it came to his knowledge that a number of the clerks had disposed of their seats to speculators at a premium, and that they were on private sale at ancy prices, he announced that tickets disposed of in that way would be canceled and that all clerks concerned in the transaction would be eashiered. His determination to this effect was published in Wednesday's STAR and carried dismay and consternation into the ranks in allotting the tickets rendered their detection well nigh certain. Yesterday they did what they could to right the matter, and the result was that most of the tickets were reclaimed was that most of the tickets were reclaimed from the speculators and taken out of the market. A few of the clerks confessed to Mr. Stocks that they had sold their tickets without any intention of wrong doing, but that when they realized the true situation they had bought them back again. They were forgiven with the understanding that they would never do so again. So far as known there are now very few of these seats at the disposal of speculators, and as their numbers are known the persons who present them may have cause to regret who present them may have cause to regre
